

Juna Kotori, Psy.S., M.A.

Juna is a psychologist, currently pursuing a Ph.D. degree in Educational and Organizational Leadership at Oakland University (Let's go Golden Grizzlies!), where she is studying leadership development and post-adversarial/ post-traumatic growth. She is a published researcher in the field of Psychology and has presented her research in national conferences.

Juna has graduate degrees in Educational Psychology and Psychology, and undergraduate degrees in Psychology, Political Science, and French, all from the University of Detroit Mercy (Proud Titan!). While at the University of Detroit Mercy, she served as President of the student body for the College of Liberal Arts and Education, and President of the Dean's Student Advisory Board. Additionally, she was co-founder and President of the university's Mentoring Program. Juna has held positions in different industries, including education, healthcare, senior living, and real estate management.

Juna's philosophy is that everyone has a gift to give to the world, and she has made it her mission to help people discover their gifts, celebrate them, grow with them, and share them generously with the world! She is a strong believer in the power of women being a positive driving force in society. As a proponent of women empowerment, she founded The K.I.N.D. Society™, an organization for women with the mission of creating diverse communities of women, where every woman is heard and nurtured, respected and valued, celebrated and empowered; communities of women whose shared experiences and unique stories provide an enriching soil for their well-being and flourishing.
